STRANGE STORY OF ROBBERY.

A WOUNDED MAN FOUND IN WHITE PLAINS SAYS "KNOCKOUT" DROPS WERE GIVEN

HIM IN THIS CITY. James L. Hunt, of Chappaqua, was found at 2 o'clock yesterday morning wandering about the streets of White Plains in a dazed and apparently intoxicated condition. Blood from a wound in his forehead had streamed down his face and upon his clothing. He was taken to Dr. Dehart's office, where he received medical attention. The man was where he received medical attention. The man was evidentily respectable, and Dr. Dehart gave it as his opinion that he was suffering from the effects of knockout-drops. The man was taken to the Windsor Hotel, in White Plains, and iate yesterday afternoon had sufficiently recovered to be able to give some account of himself, but not in a very clear manner.

As nearly as can be learned from his story, knockout drops were given Mr. Hunt, after which he was robbed in this city, on Monday night. He came to New-York Monday on business. He had a large sum of money in his pockets, and after attending to his business matters he estimates he had $400 or $500 left. He entered a small uprown hotel, which he cannot locate, at 7 o'clock for supper. He remembers no more until he found himself in the hotel in White Plains. His money, watch and chain were missing. He faintly remembers being assisted on a train and again being helped off, evidently at White Plains. Dr. behart thinks the cut in the man's forehead was caused by a fall. The doctor says he was unable to detect any signs of liquer on the man's forehead was caused by a fall. The doctor says he was unable to detect any signs of liquer on the man when he was taken to his office.

HIS WIFE HIS ACCUSED.

CHARGE AGAINST AN OLD EMPLOYE. vestigating a charge against Patrick J. Conklin, one of the oldest employes in his department. For a quarter of a century Conklin has had charge of a storehouse in Duane-st, where furniture and clothing in charge of the Public Administrator are made by his third wife, to whom he was married about two years ago, and who has been living apart about two years ago, and who has been living apart from him nearly all that time. The woman formerly was the wife of a guard on the Third-ave, elevated railroad, named Marshall, and she left him and went to live with another man in a house in Third-ave, near Fourteenth-st. Passing the house on his train, Marshall saw the couple together at the window of the house, and the sight drove him to desperation. He went to the house and shot the other man dead. Then he shot his wife, wounding her dangerously, and he finished the business by killing himself.

After leaving a hospital, Mrs. Marshall went to the storehouse in Duane-st, to identify some property which had belonged to her husband, and Corakin, who had burled two wives, fell in love with her and married her. She lived with him only thirty-two days. Recently she became acquainted with a man who is known as a tipster at some of the newspaper offices, and it was through his effort to work up a newspaper story that she made the charge which led to the investigation. She declared that Conklin gave to her property which was in his care at the storehouse in Duane-st, and she exhibited some articles of clothing and jewelry which had belonged, she said, to actresses who had died.

Conklin has made a sworn denial of her story.

which had belonged, she said, to actresses who had died.

Conklin has made a sworn denial of her story, and has declared that some of the things which his gave to the woman had belonged to his second wife, who was a maid in the employ of a rich woman, and that the other things were purchased by him at auctioneers' sales. He produced receipts to show what he had bought at the sales, and his daughter identified some of the things which had belonged to her mother. The books of the Public Administrator show that the articles which were said to have belonged to actresses had been sold at auction, and the money had been accounted for. Mr. Hoes said yesterday that he was inclined to believe that Conklin was not guilty of the charge made by the woman, but he intended to make a thorough investigation.
